

ABSTRACT

5 A method and device for determining the stability margin of a RF repeater. The method is carried out in two steps, viz.
establishing the amplification of the repeater as a function of the frequency in a frequency band, and observing the magnitude of wave-like variations in the established frequency response, this magnitude constituting a measure of the 10 stability margin such that an increasing magnitude corresponds to a decreasing stability margin.

15

20